New Webinar: Designing a Law Enforcement-Friendly Crisis Service

Part 2 of SAMHSA'S GAINS Center's Crisis Response Models Virtual Learning Community

April 22, 2020, 2:00-3:00 p.m. ET

Register today for the second webinar in the Crisis Response Models series to hear about how two programs have built effective, robust, and law enforcement-friendly crisis services.

Law enforcement officers are often the first to respond to individuals experiencing mental health crises. In order for crisis services to be utilized by law enforcement as an alternative to the hospital emergency department or jail, it is essential that crisis services have policies and practices that facilitate drop-offs by officers. The webinar will examine the implementation of law enforcement-friendly policies in a crisis care center open to anyone in Tucson (Arizona) and a center in Knox County (Tennessee) built for the justice-involved population in crisis.

Following the webinar, there will be a 60-minute open-format discussion group for webinar participants to take a deeper dive into the material and present questions to the speakers. Come prepared with questions for a one-on-one conversation.
